

WINTER 2019

Winter Session 2019 Courses — Georgetown

ANTH-101 Introduction to Social and Cultural Anthropology 3cr

510 (LEC) TuWTh 8:30a-11:30a Instructor: B Peasall

The world is becoming a smaller place in terms of interactions around the globe. All of us regularly interact with people from many different cultures. As our society becomes increasingly diverse, understanding and appreciating cultural differences has never been more important than it is now. This is particularly the case for those entering the field of education, the medical field as well as business. This course will explore the study of culture as practiced by anthropologists. In part, this course will look at the similarities and differences between existing cultures around the world. We will explore what makes up a cultural systems and look at how culture allows human beings to survive in the particular social and physical environments within which they live. Ultimately, this course will foster an understanding of diverse cultures necessary for success in an increasingly diverse world.

Section meets in Lewes, DE. Satisfies the University multicultural requirement.

MUSC-101 Appreciation of Music 3cr

510 (LEC) TuWTh 12:30p-3:30p Instructor: N. Ames

Music is the universal language. To study its history is to understand the timeline of our existence. This course is designed to acquaint students with the elements of music and the primary musical periods of traditional Western European music. Together, we will train our ears to better understand the wonderful language of music.
